Theme for the Year: Infinite Possibilities

Focus of the Season: Reconnecting with our Foundations

Thought for the Season:

We can be more healthy and more prosperous and can advance our own welfare in many ways by simply deciding what it is we desire to be, or to do, and then giving the matter enough conscious attention so that it becomes a habitual thought pattern — that is, the Law of Mind maintaining it for us. The Law of mind is obedient to conscious direction.

Ernest Holmes, Basic Ideas of Science of Mind

Putting the FUN in Fundamentals

The beginning of a new year is an opportune moment to take stock of how we are managing our life and decide where there is room for improvement, where we have succeeded, and what benefits have been realized. (Notice, the “R” word* is carefully avoided!) Similarly, employers evaluate employees annually in order to reward increased creativity, productivity and leadership and establish new goals.

Performance levels are measured to determine degrees of change; but the IDEALS against which those various facets are being evaluated generally remain consistent.

In a way, the same is true for measuring our spiritual growth or “level of consciousness.” While every individual’s spiritual journey is unique, we share a common basis for our spiritual sustenance in studying Science of Mind. Just as our doctor uses the same instruments to measure our vital signs during our annual physical, the basic principles of Science of Mind are the tools we use to take our spiritual pulse.

This year, we enjoy another return to the fundamentals featuring talks by a series of dynamic and inspirational new thought leaders:

January 4: Rev. Meredith Gray - “The Thing Itself”

January 11: Rev. Louisa Gravelle - “The Way It Works”

January 18 & 25: Rev. Paul Braden - “What It Does” and “How To Use It”

On Sunday mornings, from the serenity of our chapel we will set out on our New Year’s spiritual journey. The return to fundamentals is the beginning: to see where you stand in consciousness and where you want to set your sights for new growth. Then, as always, we spend the year exploring many approaches for how to achieve new spiritual and life goals.

In fact, the fun has already started with the new four-week class being offered on Saturday mornings by Rev. Paul Braden, based on the book, Magic of the Mind, by Ernest Holmes. This is a dynamic and interactive class that focuses on the activity of individualized spiritual discovery. The course may be attended as a complete four-week adventure or on a class-by-class basis.

However, you decide to participate in the activities at the Center for Spiritual Living, Glendale, we will happily welcome you!

Join us, and we’ll all have FUN!

*New Year’s Resolutions? They are entirely your decision!
